Pillar 5 of 11

Movement Everyday

Vyayama

Category: Body · 30 min/day · 12 karma points

The body was built to move daily. Vyayama is not exercise — it is the maintenance ritual of being human.

OVERVIEW

What is this practice?

Movement Everyday (Vyayama) is the principle that the body must be challenged daily — but not destroyed. Ayurveda distinguishes vyayama (rejuvenating exercise) from ati-vyayama (depleting overexercise). The goal is not maximum output; it is consistent input.

30 minutes a day, every day, beats 90 minutes three times a week. This pillar emphasises walking, yoga, mobility, and strength — in that order of priority.

Movement is also the most accessible mood regulator. A 20-minute walk produces measurably more antidepressant effect than most prescriptions, with effect onset in under an hour.

SCIENCE + TRADITION

Why it works

Daily walking — particularly outdoor walking — produces BDNF (brain-derived neurotrophic factor), the molecule most strongly correlated with new neuron growth and resistance to depression. The effect requires only 7,000-10,000 steps daily.

The Hatha Yoga tradition (codified by Svatmarama and Gheranda) prescribes asana not for fitness but for steadiness — the body must be capable of sitting motionless for meditation. Movement is the foundation, not the goal.

DAILY GUIDEHow to practice this today

1. Begin with 5 minutes of gentle joint rotation (neck, shoulders, hips, ankles).
2. 10-15 minutes of yoga: Surya Namaskar (Sun Salutation) is the universal sequence.
3. 20-30 minute walk — outdoor light is non-negotiable. Pre-breakfast is ideal.
4. Twice a week: add 15 minutes of strength work (bodyweight is enough).
5. Once a week: a longer 60-90 minute session — hike, swim, dance, sport.
6. Never train hard if you slept under 6 hours — walk instead.
7. Always close with 2 minutes of stillness (Savasana).

SCRIPTUREWhat the tradition says

“Salutation to Adinatha (Shiva) who expounded the knowledge of Hatha Yoga, which like a staircase leads the aspirant to the high-pinnacled Raja Yoga.”

— Hatha Yoga Pradipika 1.1 (Svatmarama)

“Success comes to him who is engaged in the practice. How can one get success without practice? By merely reading books on Yoga, one can never get success.”

— Hatha Yoga Pradipika 1.65 (Svatmarama)

“Yoga arises in one who is moderate in eating, rest, work, and recreation — destroying all sorrow.”

— Bhagavad Gita 6.17

TROUBLESHOOTINGCommon obstacles*I don't have 30 minutes.

Walk for 10. Three 10-minute walks beat zero 30-minute walks. The barrier is starting, not continuing.

I keep getting injured.

You are doing ati-vyayama (overexertion). Drop intensity by half for two weeks. Yoga and walking only. The body must adapt, not survive.

I'm bored of my routine.

Variety is part of the practice. Rotate three modalities across the week: yoga + walking + strength. Boredom is usually a signal to add — not subtract.

FOR YOUR DOSHAA note on constitution

Vata types: choose gentle, rhythmic, grounding (yoga, swimming, walking) — avoid running on hard surfaces. Pitta types: cooling and non-competitive (swimming, hiking, gentle yoga). Kapha types: vigorous and sweat-inducing — running, HIIT, dance.
